SURVIVORS

 SUPER VOLCANO	Incinerated, buried or burning alive. If not killed by the initial blast, rapid respiratory failure.	Survival is unlikely. Run away if you are not already trapped. Respiratory failure is imminent. Seek help or suffer grisly death.	Skies blacken, crops fail and ecologies crumble, bringing civilization to its knees. Humanity goes underground to survive.	13%
 NUCLEAR WAR	You are vaporized. At least it was fast. Just a white flash and then you're gone.	Everything is on fire. Severe radiation exposure will kill you in hours or days. You will suffer. Only the sheltered survive.	Escape the area, gather resources and find shelter. Devote your life to survival. Make friends and kill your enemies before they kill you.	19%
 VIRUS, DISEASE OR PLAGUE	In the event of a pandemic you will be quarantined and likely left to die painfully slow.	You may escape quarantine but your days are numbered. Microorganisms have their way with your body until it dies.	Manage to escape the zone of infection and you have an outside shot at living, though society will have collapsed. Isolate and survive.	27%
 EXTRATERRESTRIAL INVASION	Humans are expendable. You die knowing that your race was a cosmic flash in the pan.	All of humanity is swiftly overtaken by the advanced intelligence and technology of a violent and superior life form.	Aliens may keep a few of us around for nefarious purposes. A sliver of our species may outwit them long enough to hang on.	1%
 BLACK HOLES AND SUPERNOVAE	Utter annihilation. The universe is a dangerous place. Survival is impossible.	Destruction on a cosmic scale spares few if any. Billions will die in an instant. The rest are left to dwindle out of existence.	Those lucky enough to be in the right place with the right resources might be able to go underground and survive, but probably not.	0.1%
 ENVIRONMENTAL COLLAPSE	Whether we poison our environment or Mother Nature lets loose, it will be the demise of many.	Ecologies collapse and life is no longer be sustainable through natural means. Without a technological edge, we perish.	Humans are an evolving, adaptive species. Of all the ways the world could end, this leaves the most room for survival if we can overcome.	30%
 THE RAPTURE	Jesus Christ Almighty! The righteous rise to Heaven and ye sinners are stuck in Hell.	The Lord's wrath is ultimate. If, however, you find yourself still hanging out after everyone ascends, start praying. Hard.	By its very definition, Armageddon has no survivors. Metaphysically, who knows? Anything is possible when the Almighty is involved.	0%
